Call for Applications: ESCRS Video Competition Judge

Are you passionate about surgical education, innovation and excellence in ophthalmology?

ESCRS is seeking experienced ophthalmologists and surgeons to join the ESCRS Video Competition judging panel. This is an opportunity to contribute to an important ESCRS educational initiative, recognise excellence in ophthalmic video content and collaborate with fellow experts from the international ophthalmic community.

Key Responsibilities

- Review and score video submissions using the relevant judging criteria.
- Participate in the first and second rounds of judging.
- Attend the final face-to-face judging meeting to review the leading entries and select prize winners.
- Contribute to discussions on the development and future direction of the competition.
- Help prepare questions for the first-prize winners in each category.
- Attend the Video Awards session at the ESCRS Annual Congress and participate as required.

Who Should Apply?

- Experienced ophthalmologists and surgeons with relevant clinical expertise.
- Individuals with an interest in surgical education, innovation and high-quality ophthalmic video content.
- Applicants who can evaluate submissions objectively and consistently.
- Collaborative individuals who are comfortable contributing to panel discussions and collective decision-making.
- Applicants able to commit sufficient time to completing both rounds of judging and attending the final judging meeting and Video Awards session.

Time Commitment

- First-round judging: approximately 20 hours over several weeks.
- Second-round judging: approximately 7 hours.
- Final judging: a face-to-face meeting lasting approximately 3–4 hours, normally held a couple of months before the ESCRS Annual Congress.
- ESCRS Annual Congress: attendance at the Video Awards session is expected.
